

Meet the 2014 recipients of the

Demeter Award of Excellence

recognizing outstanding efforts in support of women in agribusiness

The Demeter Award of Excellence, named as such for Demeter, the goddess of the harvest from ancient Greek mythology, are presented annually in three categories. Congratulations to these 2014 recipients:

Kay Kuenker, vice president of Global Public Affairs and Government Affairs at Dow AgroSciences, has been chosen as Leader of the Year, in recognition of her work to expand and diversify the offerings of women's initiatives at Dow AgroSciences, in effect furthering the mission of Women in Agribusiness.

Andrea Mariela Grobocopatel, co-founder, shareholder and vice president of GRUPO LOS GROBO of Buenos Aires, has been selected as Innovator of the Year, an award that acknowledges an individual who has demonstrated innovation in the initiation, development or launch of gender diversity programs and/or who has affected positive change in her company or the industry with regard to women's advancement.

Agrium, Inc. has been chosen as Company of the Year, in recognition of its efforts in initiating programs to support the professional development, achievements and overall growth of women in the industry.

"We had tremendous positive response for recognizing the exemplary contributions of women in ag when these awards debuted at the 2013 event," said Event Director Joy O'Shaughnessy of HighQuest Group, the globally recognized strategic agribusiness consulting, events and media company that hosts the Summit. "This year, we stand even stronger in our mission to nurture women's advancement and achievement in the sector, and are honored to have such distinguished, accomplished award recipients who share this endeavor. Thank you all for your commendable efforts!"
